cost $35." This little statement is floating through the papers, but many persons probably hail to catch its significance. It illustrates the blighting influence of that terrible tariff. The duty upon pens is nine cents per gross. Under tariff protection American producers have reduced the cost from $35 per gross to eight cents, or one cent less than the tariff charge upon the imported article. Of course every accountant and schoolboy realizes the oppressive taxation he is subjected to by the operation of a tariff capable of working such risults.

The Owen Sunday closing law went into effect last Sunday in Ohio. As usual with all liquor legislation in that State, the saloon keepers have taken it upon themselves to declare the law unconstitutional, and as a consequence many of decent sentiment, which the discovery them refused to close up, openly defy- has stirred up, will be strong enough to ing the law. The arrests in Cincinnau, however, indicate that the authorities are determined to have the law obeyed. It may, it is true, only be a spasmodic that candid West Virginia Democrats would so class this State if called upon for a sober and truthful estimate. They would not risk their reputations by claiming more than this. The fact that the party las been steadily losing ground of late years and that the Democratic majority has become constantly smaller, until it has almost disappeared, is at least moral evidence that it may go Republican this year.

The progress made in West Virginia may be called "home made" progress. Other states have absorbed the attention of the National Republican Committee. We have depended almost wholly on what we could do for ourselves. Our own speakers, our own committees and our own means have been the factors that have wrought the change, while other States have had their own resources supplemented by extraneous aid. The unexpected happened in the appointment of Melville W. Fuller to the Chief Justiceship of the United States Supreme Court.

It may, it is true, only be a spasmodic move in the right direction, and after a time things drop into the old way, but it will have its good effect, nevertheless. Though many saloon keepers were arrested in Cincinnati it is said that the majority of them obeyed the law and kept their houses closed. This resulted, says one paper, in a loss of $44,000 to the liquor traffic. But what a game it was for the men who did not spend the money. They are just that much ahead, and enjoyed other luxuries that were more healthful and beneficial. Something can be said to have been accomplished by the Owen law in this one item.
